MR. G. M. TRIPP FINDS EXPANSION IN CALIFORNIA ELECTRICAL WORLD

High Tension Lines Prevail, With Increasing Demand for Power for Industrial Activities

Remarkable development in connection with the use of electricity in Southern California has kept pace with the increased demand for power and light, Mr. G. M. Tripp, general manager of the B.C. Electric Railway, stated yesterday on his return from California.

Mr. Tripp sought to examine some phases of development, particularly in relation to distribution in the principal cities in the southern part of the state. He found the problem of power, the factories and offices much less troublesome than in some of the British Columbia cities, owing to the existence of lines, which enabled the power to be kept off travelled streets. The distribution is carried on high tension lines, up to 12,000 volts, for manufacturing purposes.

There had been a tremendous increase in the electrical development of the state, and practically all the best sources of supply had been brought into use for the community, he learns. The consequence had been that the demand for steam plants had declined, and oil had grown. The demand for electrical energy had been stimulated by the intense development in manufacturing, and curiously enough the same physical phenomenon had occurred as observed here, that the industrial development had caused the available supply of water for hydro-electrical development was diminishing, owing to the dry seasons which had followed in sequence for several years.

There had been an increase in cost of production, but the vast volume of business which was being done in the industry had compensated for the increase in the cost of production.

Mr. Tripp was greatly struck with the method of handling the street traffic in the southern cities and expresses the belief that after the visitor comes to appreciate the rules of safety on the streets than in the more casual regulations of the British Columbia cities.

city he should be forced to regard every day as a holiday.

"In so far as my four years in Canada are concerned," said he, "each year has been a greater delight to me than the preceding."

"Monte Carlo," he said, "was the only playground that had become really profitable in a financial way as a playground. Playgrounds came and went. The travel towards them changed with time to time and it was not wise to look to that aspect of traffic alone."

"Develop your city and the Island on the ground of sound commerce," he advised.

Turning his attention to the railway system, Mr. Tripp continued, the speaker said that the progress of the Canadian National Railways in the past four years had been due in large measure to the national development of Canada itself. It was also, he said, due to the loyalty of the men of the C.N.R. system from the days of the First World War.

The president in passing paid a further compliment to the employees of the service. He referred to them as a devoted and enthusiastic group of men and women who "were working in your interests 365 days in the year."

He recalled the fact that when he came to the C.N.R. as president he was faced with the problem of consolidating into one system and developing as such the "widely flung rail system" that composed it.

In doing this there were problems that had to be faced. There had to be done in a few years what other systems had done in decades.

Following Precedent

The Province of British Columbia was endowed, he said, with everything that made for progress and prosperity. It would appear that the province was described as the "embryo of that Empire with the objectionable features of the latter eliminated. In its mineral wealth there had been only a start made in the development. Its forests and its fisheries promised all kinds of wealth to the country."

Then, in the matter of commerce, British Columbia provided the portals through which the commerce of the country would find the outer world in no small degree. In this connection he called attention to the fact that Vancouver had been a greater tonnage receiver through the port of Vancouver last year than through San Francisco.

Sir Henry said that he looked forward to conditions that would some day make the port of Victoria no less important than that of Vancouver. Following an remark up the speaker advised that the people of Victoria and Vancouver Island should make it a point to endeavor to develop the industrial and commercial importance of the territory here as well as the tourist trade.

"You on Vancouver Island, regard

"Tell him to take McCoy's Cod Liver Extract Tablets for a couple of months and get enough good healthy flesh on his bones to look like a real man."

"Tell him it's the only way to take care of his bones."

"Tell him that thousands of thin, puny, scrawny men all over America have improved their physical health and appearance and blessed the day they first heard of these wonderful substances."

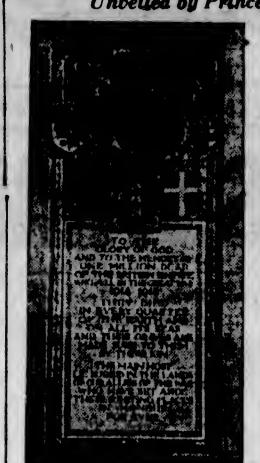

"Tell him that the C.N.R. has recently received a grant of $1,000,000 to assist in the construction of a new bridge over the river. On the contrary, these parts were all built to compete with one another."

In four years time, however, they had multiplied the net earnings of the system by ten. He was satisfied that the C.N.R. would pay an important part in the development of the Dominion.

Public utilities like the C.N.R. were to be judged by the measure of whether the service that was given was satisfactory. This service was when the enterprise was performing the public duty for which it existed, which was the carrying of freight and passengers at reasonable rates.

If this were to be done satisfactorily the next thing was to look to the financial side and see if this was satisfactory. Under all the heads he felt that it could not be said that the C.N.R. was not satisfactory. The financial improvement, he felt, had kept pace with the other improvements. When some benighted armchair critics with "whispers of death" as to the condition of the national railway, the whisperers could be dismissed and the people could view the situation with equanimity.

C.P.R., said Sir Henry, is doing a public service. The C.N.R. employees represented a fine body of men earning good wages. They were comfortably provided for and were not Bolsheviks in their tendencies. They were bringing up children in the country and were all-round good citizens. Such a parrotic body was a national asset.

Praise for Mr. Schwengen

Before concluding, Sir Henry congratulated the Canadian Board of Trade in selecting Mr. C. P. W. Schwengen, the president of the local Chamber of Commerce, as chairman of the transportation section of that body.

In the last twelve months all the Boards of Trade in Canada had been amalgamated into one, which was teaching Canadians to think nationally rather than provincially. In this there was a most valuable duty being performed.

"The most important or one of the most important committees," said Sir Henry, "is this one of transportation. It will have to do with the relations between the various communities of the Dominion and the transportation systems. It is fortunate indeed that selection was made, and may I add, a good one for this important task?" With respect to Canadian Clubs, the speaker pointed to the good work being done by them throughout the country. These clubs were causing Canadians to think nationally. He praised the move including the ladies in the clubs with the men clubs. They could get the men and women thinking nationally, setting aside all other interests, they would be doing more to promote the progress of Canada than by any other method.

The attendees at the luncheon was very gratifying in face of the fact that it fell upon a national holiday. Mr. Henry C. Hall, K.C., the president of the Canadian Club, concluding the speaker, extended his congratulations to him upon having attained another birthday, and also referred to his recent marriage, extending on behalf of the club, to Sir Henry and Lady Thornton the best of wishes.

Sir Henry expressed his appreciation of the good wishes extended to him, and also to Lady Thornton.

Following Precedent

All the railway systems of the North American Continent, including the C.P.R., of which all Canadians were so justly proud, had been the growth of decades. The brains, the scientific knowledge and the business ability of those who developed these systems had been brought to play on the task for many years. The systems were rounded out by additions and by development of the original systems so as to make up a complete system.

The speaker alluded to the many lines of railways that had been built west of the Mississippi River in the United States in the years following the American War. These had all passed through their lines just as the C.N.R. had done. These difficulties were faced in this connection.

The lines in the United States had looked askance at the situation with respect to these roads in their period. It was wondered what the result would be just as they had done in Canada in respect to the C.N.R.

The lines in the United States had difficulties but in the end they were converted into paying propositions.

Canada had not differed from other countries in appearing in the matter of building ahead of the demands.

"I have to say," he added, "that in Canada we have had to do as if there had been too much building ahead of the demands of the traffic, perhaps."

Muscle Pain

"The railways are here, however, and had to be dealt with. The traffic must be provided for the railways by the development of the country."

It must not be forgotten, said the speaker, that the C.N.R. had a recent origin. Its component parts, moreover, had not been built to assist the other parts. On the contrary, these parts were all built to compete with one another.

In four years time, however, they had multiplied the net earnings of the system by ten. He was satisfied that the C.N.R. would pay an important part in the development of the Dominion.

Public utilities like the C.N.R. were to be judged by the measure of whether the service that was given was satisfactory. This service was when the enterprise was performing the public duty for which it existed, which was the carrying of freight and passengers at reasonable rates.

If this were to be done satisfactorily the next thing was to look to the financial side and see if this was satisfactory.

Under all the heads he felt that it could not be said that the C.N.R. was not satisfactory.

Viennese Professor's Treatise on Biological Theory of Inheritance Is Questioned by Scientists

LONDON, Nov. 8.—A scientific article written by Dr. K. R. Kammeyer, of the American Museum of Natural History of New York, led to the discovery of a scientific fraud which resulted in the suicide of Professor Paul Kammerer, world famous biologist, in Vienna, on September 24, according to dispatches received here today, which quote an explanatory letter left by Dr. Kammerer.

Dr. Noble, according to Dr. Kammerer's note, attacked the veracity of the latter's experiments in a treatise in the magazine Nature, published in London. Dr. Kammerer had started the scientific world by upholding the now generally rejected biological theory of inheritance of acquired characteristics, on the basis of his own experiments with heredity.

Dr. Noble, however, suggested in his article that certain markings on toads, on which Dr. Kammerer had based his remarkable claims, were false. In the condition under the skin of the toads of coloring matter, probably India ink.

Dr. Kammerer immediately began an investigation, and in the letter which he left before shooting himself he confessed that he had found half of Dr. Noble's accusations to be true. Dr. Noble's pine laboratory assistants must have played a cruel trick on him by tampering with his specimens.

"All of the facts are true," ran the last sentence of Dr. Kammerer's note, referring to Dr. Noble's article. "The work of my whole life has been destroyed. It has given me my death blow."

Dr. Kammerer was the author of many works on heredity and recently had received an offer from Soviet Russia to take charge of the new Government laboratory.

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—Dr. G. Kingsley Noble, Curator of the Department of Reptiles and Amphibia of the American Museum of Natural History, said last night:

"I am very sorry to learn Professor Kammerer's claims in his note that my exposure of his supposed proofs that acquired characters are inheritable has resulted in the way it did. He was, however, the only biologist on record who ever had to be investigated and exposed."

Dr. Noble said that when Dr. Kammerer, who had lectured in this country, advanced his theory friends urged him to make an investigation. To do this Dr. Noble made a journey necessary for him to go to Vienna, where, in collaboration with the director of a German biological institute, he obtained samples of Dr. Kammerer's specimens and brought them back to this country.

The first test was made, he said, the most important being a chemical test which showed the presence of ink in the specimen. The second was a histological test and the third was made by dissection of the whole structure of a frog. Dr. Noble's tests were completed last May, but his paper on the result was not published in a scientific journal until August.

"When I saw the specimens at Vienna last year I knew there was fraud somewhere," said Dr. Noble last night. "The further examination of the specimens in the laboratory proved it. I am sorry it all has resulted this way."

"I am not two-faced."

SOUTH AFRICA AND EMPIRE

South Africa's claim for international recognition of her "independent status" in the Empire has given rise to a question which will be discussed long after the echoes of the present Imperial Conference have died away. It is a claim which opens up such a vista of possibilities that it is very certain no decision whatever, save perhaps an abstract one, will be reached by the present gathering of Prime Ministers. What cannot be overlooked is that Pernier Hertzog's plea is regarded in some quarters as offering the thin end of the wedge for a future pretext to break away from the Commonwealth of Nations. That is as it may be. When out of power South Africa's Prime Minister carried on what bore a very close resemblance to an anti-British campaign. In power one of his acts was an attempt to substitute some other flag for the Union Jack.

The London Morning Post points out that South Africa, like the other Dominions, is mistress in her own house; that she has complete control over her own affairs. In the question of foreign policy she is consulted, and, indeed, the whole problem of Imperial policy has been laid before the present session of the London Conference. The question asked by The Morning Post is as to whether the Dominions are at all likely to enjoy such freedom upon any other status. "There is for example?" The Post says, "the status of complete international independence. That implies, in this natural world of struggle for survival, the power of adequate defence both by sea and land. Where is the South African Navy which could defend her trade, prevent a blockade of her coasts or a landing on her shores? It does not exist, nor could it be built. It may be said that there is no power threatening such a conquest. We reply that where there is wealth unprotected the conqueror's created by that consideration." The Post then goes on to say:

South Africa without the guarantee of the British Empire, which her would fall into an uneasy state of insecurity by which her credit, her finances, and her future would be continually affected. Then on the economic side she would lose, what is at present a certainty, her favored position in the greatest market for product that exists in the world. But would it bring her even internal peace? As we are asked to be frank let us remind General Hertzog that he has attempted to interfere with the flag that flies over South Africa, and for the time being he has failed. Why? Not because of any lack of principle of alignment with the Crown, we are at a loss to see the difference between us; for we cannot believe that he means an allegiance for the profits of peace and a neutrality in the dangers of war.

OIL FROM COAL

The coal strike in Britain in 1921 involved a loss to the country estimated at £300,000,000. The present strike has lasted more than twice as long, so that it is possible the loss on this occasion will be well over £600,000,000. The stoppage has had one good effect because it has set in movement machinery for economy in the use of coal that ultimately may prove of very vital importance to the fuel industry as a whole. During 1924 Britain consumed 184,000,000 tons of coal, and of this amount 147,000,000 tons were used in a raw condition, thus involving very great waste. Oil is being imported into Britain at the rate of 1,300 million gallons a year, and now efforts are being made to extract oil from coal on a commercial scale. Considerable research work has been done in laboratories, but the stage has yet to be reached where the expenditure of capital on such oil extraction can be regarded as commercially feasible.

Sir Robert Horne, in speaking before the Institution of Fuel Economy Engineers, has been telling them of certain investigations. Research work tends to show that a large portion of oil can be extracted from coal and there will be left a residuum of solid fuel of almost as large capacity in the production of heat and energy as the original coal from which the oil is extracted. If it is possible to carry out this extraction commercially there will be a vast change in the fortunes of the British nation. Sir Robert says that the production of oil, leaving the residuum of solid fuel, can be obtained from coal which is by no means the most valuable commercially. Oil produced in commercial quantities in this way would, therefore, add enormously to the wealth of the country, cheapen the production of electrical energy, and, so far as the coal industry is concerned it would be possible to make a bigger division between the wage-earners and the owners.

One process by which oil is obtained is by treating powdered coal with hydrogen under pressure. This is a method followed in Germany. Another method is that of obtaining, by a process of low temperature carbonization of coal, liquid fuel and oil, together with gas of high calorific value and with a residuum of solid fuel of special value. Neither experiment has yet led to any definite commercial conclusion, but there are great possibilities foreshadowed, and Sir Robert Horne says that, with the great masses of coal in Britain, a better use of coal will benefit that country more almost than any other country in the world.

MORE MEMOIRS

Sir William Robertson's memoirs of the war, entitled "Soldiers and Statesmen, 1914 to 1918," appear to be written so that his experience may prove of profit to others, and particularly with the hope in view of directing attention to the desirability of improvement in the country's organization for war. Sir William is inclined to agree with Lord Salisbury who said in 1900 that, "he did not think that the British Constitution as at present worked is a good fighting machine." Certain it is that Sir William, as Chief of Staff, as well as those in high army commands, appear to have suffered such interference during the war from politicians as often as the thin end of the wedge for a future pretext to break away from the Commonwealth of Nations. That is as it may be. When out of power South Africa's Prime Minister carried on what bore a very close resemblance to an anti-British campaign. In power one of his acts was an attempt to substitute some other flag for the Union Jack.

The Parisian fashion note does not say specifically that the skirts worn by women are to be shorter. It says women are going to wear kilts, and the average kilt worn by mere men contains a good deal more cloth than the average skirt as at present worn by the average woman. The kilt, as worn by enthusiastic Scots, and sometimes by people who are not Scots, always falls below the knee. It does that, doubtless, because the average knee on the average man is not, strictly speaking, a thing of beauty. Nor is the average knee of the average woman, strictly speaking, a thing of beauty. The knees of most men, from the point of view of the artist, are too prominent, too bony and too nobly. They should, like Lavvie Wilfer's stockings, be taken for granted. They should not be too prominently displayed. The same objection may be taken to the knees of women. It should be sufficient for all purposes for everybody to "know that they are there."

Of course, there are exceptions to this rule, as every man with an observant eye in his head and an accompanying taste for beauty of figure and grace of movement knows; but, unfortunately, women believe the degrees of fashion are as arbitrary as the laws of the Medes and the Persians are reported to have been, and a not inconsiderable number of women apparently refuse to admit that there are any exceptions to the rule.

From an artistic and a sanitary point of view we believe it would be a calamity if Paris were to decree a reversion to the old bedraggling, sidewalk-sweeping and voluminous skirt. The kilt would be a welcome compromise between two extremes. The kilt, in its original conception, was a very convenient garment. It permitted of a free and easy movement of the legs, and that was a matter of considerable importance to the original kilt-wearers, for there were frequent misunderstandings and often very bitter feuds between the clans which wore the tartan, and sometimes celerity of movement was a matter of life and death. But in its original conception the kilt was more of a garment of utility than a garment of beauty. The cloth of which it was made was not so artistically colored or fashioned as the material which adorns the soldiers of the Highland regiments of the present day.

The modern kilt is a thing of beauty, then, and if it is true that kilts, and the neat little jackets which are worn with kilts, are to be generally worn by women, what a spectacle the streets of our cities will present one of these days! If the ugly modern headgear of the women should be supplanted by the neat and jaunty Highland bonnet, with a becoming feather in it, the transformation would be complete. A Glengarry or a Balmoral would sit in entrancing style upon a small but well-proportioned head with bobbed hair.

Should such things come to pass, all the gloomy forebodings of old fogies about the demoralizing tendencies of modern times and fashions would be laughed to scorn. Should such splendid things come to pass we shall all, even those of us who have been sitting in the seats of the scowling and jeering at the street corners in the afternoons gazing in admiration at the glorious procession of neatly and becomingly dressed women.

Indeed, we are not sure that the new fashions for women may not speedily affect the fashions for men. Notwithstanding the long-sustained popularity of trousers, there are indications that even trousers may undergo a bobbing process. Nearly all male golfers, and a not inconsiderable number of males who are not golfers, are now wearing knickerbockers, vulgarly called "plus fours," garments which but a short time ago were objects of public derision not only in the United States but in Canada. The next logical step may be kilts, for just as "plus fours" are defended because they admit of greater freedom in walking than long trousers, kilts may be commended because they do not hamper the movements of the legs to the same extent as knickerbockers. If the climate of all parts of America were as soft and balmy as the climate of Vancouver Island, the probabilities are that the people of all parts of America soon would be clad in the classic attire of Old Gaul. Our stern and unbending neighbors on the Prairies, who clothe themselves from head to toe in the skins of animals for a considerable part of the year, are not likely to become enthusiastic on the subject of the kilt.

Note and Comment

By R. B. D.

A very reassuring note has been received by a contemporary newspaper. This note bears a Paris date line, and Paris is the place which regulates the style of dresses which women of all civilized parts of the world are supposed to wear. The note is reassuring because it announces that the skirts worn by women are to be longer. If it had announced that the skirts worn by women are to be shorter, that announcement would have been far from reassuring—at least to people afflicted with old-fashioned notions—for the skirts worn by some women at the present time appear to have reached the limit, not only as to length but as to skimpiness. If the new fashion had decreed a still further curtailment in the length of the skirt, as we already have suggested, the sidewalks of Victoria would soon have presented a spectacle something like a parade of the Gold Dust twins.

The Parisian fashion note does not say specifically that the skirts worn by women are to be shorter. It says women are going to wear kilts, and the average kilt worn by mere men contains a good deal more cloth than the average skirt as at present worn by the average woman. The kilt, as worn by enthusiastic Scots, and sometimes by people who are not Scots, always falls below the knee. It does that, doubtless, because the average knee on the average man is not, strictly speaking, a thing of beauty. Nor is the average knee of the average woman, strictly speaking, a thing of beauty. The knees of most men, from the point of view of the artist, are too prominent, too bony and too nobly. They should, like Lavvie Wilfer's stockings, be taken for granted. They should not be too prominently displayed. The same objection may be taken to the knees of women. It should be sufficient for all purposes for everybody to "know that they are there."

Of course, there are exceptions to this rule, as every man with an observant eye in his head and an accompanying taste for beauty of figure and grace of movement knows; but, unfortunately, women believe the degrees of fashion are as arbitrary as the laws of the Medes and the Persians are reported to have been, and a not inconsiderable number of women apparently refuse to admit that there are any exceptions to the rule.

From an artistic and a sanitary point of view we believe it would be a calamity if Paris were to decree a reversion to the old bedraggling, sidewalk-sweeping and voluminous skirt. The kilt would be a welcome compromise between two extremes. The kilt, in its original conception, was a very convenient garment. It permitted of a free and easy movement of the legs, and that was a matter of considerable importance to the original kilt-wearers, for there were frequent misunderstandings and often very bitter feuds between the clans which wore the tartan, and sometimes celerity of movement was a matter of life and death. But in its original conception the kilt was more of a garment of utility than a garment of beauty. The cloth of which it was made was not so artistically colored or fashioned as the material which adorns the soldiers of the Highland regiments of the present day.

The modern kilt is a thing of beauty, then, and if it is true that kilts, and the neat little jackets which are worn with kilts, are to be generally worn by women, what a spectacle the streets of our cities will present one of these days! If the ugly modern headgear of the women should be supplanted by the neat and jaunty Highland bonnet, with a becoming feather in it, the transformation would be complete. A Glengarry or a Balmoral would sit in entrancing style upon a small but well-proportioned head with bobbed hair.

Should such things come to pass, all the gloomy forebodings of old fogies about the demoralizing tendencies of modern times and fashions would be laughed to scorn. Should such splendid things come to pass we shall all, even those of us who have been sitting in the seats of the scowling and jeering at the street corners in the afternoons gazing in admiration at the glorious procession of neatly and becomingly dressed women.

Indeed, we are not sure that the new fashions for women may not speedily affect the fashions for men. Notwithstanding the long-sustained popularity of trousers, there are indications that even trousers may undergo a bobbing process. Nearly all male golfers, and a not inconsiderable number of males who are not golfers, are now wearing knickerbockers, vulgarly called "plus fours," garments which but a short time ago were objects of public derision not only in the United States but in Canada. The next logical step may be kilts, for just as "plus fours" are defended because they admit of greater freedom in walking than long trousers, kilts may be commended because they do not hamper the movements of the legs to the same extent as knickerbockers. If the climate of all parts of America were as soft and balmy as the climate of Vancouver Island, the probabilities are that the people of all parts of America soon would be clad in the classic attire of Old Gaul. Our stern and unbending neighbors on the Prairies, who clothe themselves from head to toe in the skins of animals for a considerable part of the year, are not likely to become enthusiastic on the subject of the kilt.

ARMISTICE DAY—1926
COMMEMORATION

Then!
Woe to me, if I dwell at ease,
My brother under fire!
Haste to the trumpet overseas,
To nerve song to bind it on the breeze,
To nerve and to inspire!

I would bear hardship, too! Be mine
His comrade to be to me!
Ye! Little brother in the line,
My soul, on every marsh of thine
Had fair keep still with thee!

Now!

That was long since, in years gone by;
The peace-time now, they say:
And he is with the lads who lie
At rest beneath a foreign sky;
The world still goes its way.

Duly the heart remembers yet
How high it beat of yore.
Aye, many weary things that fret
Its strength and stout need finds
That fellowship of war.

Ay! And if now a great Cause call
For sacrifice and stress,
As heaviness does earthward fall,
As a discarded robe, and all
Within it answers, "Yes!"

Then 'tis as once it used to be;
With sudden, joyous thrill,
I hear the marching feet, I see
The lad is in the line with me.
And we are comrades still!

—Florence Verinder.

FIFTY YEARS AGO TODAY

From The Daily British Colonist of November 9, 1876
Proceeding. The stone bridge, now charred by Messrs. Bishop, Forrest, and Smith, was opened up to the public. It spans Koksilah lake and river, which are known to be turbulent, for the purpose of prospering. The local government have offered to aid the undersigned, and it is hoped that their public spirited contribution will be sufficient to cover the cost of the bridge, which will be of great value.

Death.—Mrs. Truth, mother of ex-Lieutenant-Governor Truth, died on Tuesday night at Fairfield. The deceased lady had just completed her eightieth year. Mrs. Truth, a native of Wales, was a very industrious woman, and has lived a long life. She has had a son, Mr. Truth, who is a prominent member of the Provincial Legislature. We refer to the B.C. Soap Works of Pendray & Co., on Humboldt Street, which are turning out 6,000 lbs. of excellent soap each week, for which they find ready sale.

"No, madam," the attendant answered.

"How very odd," exclaimed the woman. "They have a fine one in the Museum at Oxford."

IN MEMORIAM
(November 11th, 1918)

I cannot paint a picture, lad,
For Britain's Hall of Fame
More fair than that which now is hung
Above thy honored name.

I cannot write a line, dear lad—
More glowing, true, and strong,
Than that which shines upon thy scroll
That right shall vanquish wrong.

I cannot sound a fairer note,
Than on thy young lips thrilled.
A song of courage, faith and love,
And hope yet unfilled.

I cannot add a single stroke
Unto thy painting fair,
But only bow in reverence, lad,
Before thy canvas there.

God grant me worthy to complete
Thy scroll, as well begun,
To sing thy song unto the end,
Nobly as thou hast done.

—Winifred M. New.

There is music, there is gladness in the air, there are bright wings swiftly lifting, there are gay notes softly ringing here and there. There are bickerings and chattering down below, while from every wood and hill-side, every meadow-land and hillock, comes sweet song. Not a shadow that comes drifting down the day but this dry mirth and madmese can dispel, till banished sadness flee away, till little airy, feathered creatures, how they bring glimpses of a life Elysian, how they quicken joyous vision as they sing! And their plumage seems to brighten all the day till no dismal cares can vex us and no fears or doubts perplex us while they stay. Little sunny, singing creatures soaring high; one with all life's love and gladness, voicing lyric mirth and madness from the sky!

CHINA GUNBOATS DO GOOD WORK

Yantse-Kiang is Patrolled by Small British Ships Only Lightly Armed With Six-Pounders

TACT AND BRITISH PRESTIGE EFFECTIVE

River Valley Quiet During Boxer Rebellion Because of Respect of Britain's Tiny Ships of War

At the present moment, when following the naval incident on the Yangtze, the little flotilla of British shallow-draught patrol boats is very prominent in the public eye, the following article by Lieutenant-Commander the Hon. J. M. Kenworthy, R.N., M.P., in "The Manchester Guardian," will be read with interest:

For forty years a flotilla of British gunboats has patrolled the great Yangtze-kiang, and another flotilla the West River, running from Hong Kong past Canton and far up into the southern provinces of Kwangtung. Up to seven years ago British patrols were predominant in these two great river basins, and almost the only foreign flags seen on those inland waters were flown by the British merchant vessels and British men-o'-war. From about 1906 onwards the Japanese and Germans began to cut in on this trade, but the British patrols still remain, commercially strong, and on the Yantze, in particular, the great merchant and shipping house of Butterfield & Swire dominates the trade.

British policy during all this long period has been to stand guard and far up the navigable Chinese rivers as possible. They suppressed piracy, supported our Consuls in the Treaty ports, gave confidence to British merchants, and, on the whole, got on well with the Chinese authorities. They do not proceed up the Chinese rivers under the license of any treaty, and we have steadily maintained our privileges of maintaining these vessels of war.

Most of them are of small size, from 150 to 200 tons burden, with two or three guns, and some with a few Maxim; their upper works, armed against rifle fire only. Though they have represented force, these individually weak units, of slow speed and shallow draught, commanded by young officers, have done their work by a combination of tact and the exercise of a certain amount of which the British have held in China, at any rate, up to recent times.

British Influence

During the great Boxer rebellion at the beginning of this century, the whole Yangtze Valley of 150,000,000 inhabitants was comparatively quiet, and there were no outrages against foreigners of any magnitude to speak of. This was almost entirely due to the influence of the British naval officers on the rivers in their little ships.

Today things are different. The industry of civil war in China is becoming ever more important than agriculture. The river basins are full of the possessors of arms, and with little respect for the British or anyone else. On the West River our force consists of five shallow-draught lightly-armed gunboats, and they are probably well able to maintain both themselves and British prestige.

On the Yangtze the situation is different. Our force consists of six heavy gunboats—the Bee, Scarab, Gnat, Cockchafer, Cricket and Mantis—of 650 tons burden, and armed with a couple of 6-in. guns. The Bee flies the flag of a Fleet Admiral (G. E. Gommon), this being a sign that the situation has altered, as during my three years on the China station, during which I made one long trip up the Yangtze, and several up the West River, the most excited officer regularly posted in the inland port of Ningpo was a senior lieutenant, and four larger gunboats patrol the lower part of the Yangtze below the famous Ichon Rapids, known to the Chinese as the "Tiger's Tooth." Above these rapids the river widens and deepens again, and is regularly patrolled by four small gunboats—the Woodcock, Wren, Starling and Hummingbird. These gunboats must be of the smallest size and shallowest draught to negotiate the rapids, and can only mount the light armament of two six-pounder guns.

The upper river patrol is under the command of a Commander (Berryman) as senior naval officer. The gunboats can only negotiate the rapids by obtaining the assistance of great gangs of coolies hauling on their cables on the river banks. Once above the rapids the river narrows at place called Ching Kiang, and there a considerable fortress was erected at the mouth of the river, commanding the supervision of German military engineers and armed with Krupp guns. These fortifications are now out of date, however, and need not stop a determined commander. The Chinese authorities at various points have threatened to fire on our ships from the Chin Kiang forts, and one famous occasion was when the commander of the fort hoisted the Boxer flag and threatened to sink a little unarmored sloop flying the white ensign. But in spite of the backing of a considerable Chinese fleet she was allowed to go through without even a rifle being fired.

strong is shown by the fact that we armed a merchant ship as an auxiliary gunboat under Commander Darley, who was with me in the Britannia, and was well-known throughout the Yangtze Valley. The great Yellow River, as the Chinese call it, is navigable by very large ships as far as Hankow, a port of great importance. In 1904 Admiral Sir George Maxwell, then in chief of the China station, proceeded 600 miles up the Yangtze to Hankow in my old ship the Glory, a first-class battleship, flying his flag. It was the first time a vessel of such size had proceeded up the river, and among the Chinese thought the end of the world had come.

In 1905 the then Commander-in-Chief (Admiral Noel) took a squadron of four battleships and two first-class armored cruisers 300 miles up to Nanking. Nanking is a very important city, and the ancient capital of the Ming dynasty. Our original intention was to proceed with the whole squadron, with sloops and destroyer in addition, to Hankow. But protests were lodged by the Japanese and certain European Powers, including the Russians, and they supported the Chinese Government. Feeding the people to go no farther. Admiral Noel cared nothing for diplomatic protest and would have proceeded on his way, but Downing Street stopped him. The actual excuse used, to which we bowed, was that the wash of these great ships at anchor would damage the river banks and injure the fields. Anyhow, we had shown what we could do, and it was not necessary to send another big ship up the Yangtze for many years afterwards. A French cruiser tried to come up, but stuck on a mudbank for six weeks.

There are no battleships on the China station now, though we have five cruisers which could proceed up the river if required. Just below Nanking the river narrows at place called Ching Kiang, and there a considerable fortress was erected at the mouth of the river, commanding the supervision of German military engineers and armed with Krupp guns. These fortifications are now out of date, however, and need not stop a determined commander. The Chinese authorities at various points have threatened to fire on our ships from the Chin Kiang forts, and one famous occasion was when the commander of the fort hoisted the Boxer flag and threatened to sink a little unarmored sloop flying the white ensign. But in spite of the backing of a considerable Chinese fleet she was allowed to go through without even a rifle being fired.

CAR DRIVERS HAVE NARROW ESCAPE

FORD COUPE ROLLS DOWN EM-BANKMENT—BOTH OCCUPANTS HURT

Chapter of Accidents Follows in Close
Succession at Parson's Bridge in
Early Evening Hours

Two automobile drivers had narrow escapes within a short distance of one another on the Island Highway yesterday evening. They are Mr. John G. Thompson, of 2718 Forest Street, an employee of the Dominion Hotel, and Mr. Korn, guest of the Sylvester Hotel. Mr. Issar, after figuring in the accident which sent Mr. Thompson's Ford coupe rolling down an embankment into a ditch, was later forced off the road himself.

The first accident happened at about 5:30 p.m. Mr. John G. Thompson, driving a coupe with Miss Birthe Bigelow, had crossed the Parson's Bridge and was about to make the turn where the Island Highway curves away to the right past the Six-Mile House. An Essex coach was approaching in the opposite direction, driven by Mr. T. W. Wood, of 1212 Commercial Avenue. Behind Mr. Thompson, Mr. Issar was driving. In a statement which he made later to Constable Meadows, he says that in passing Mr. Thompson's car he did not see the approaching Essex until too late to draw up behind the Ford. "I saw the Essex coming and Issar appears to have attempted to dart in front of the Ford, thus to avoid an accident with the approaching Essex. Swerving to the right, Mr. Issar's car apparently struck the front wheel of the Ford, sending it rolling down the embankment into a ditch. Mr. Issar reported to Constable Meadows of the Provincial Police that he stopped and helped Mr. Wood extricate Mr. Thompson and Miss Bigelow from the coupe. Mr. Thompson was unconscious at the time, but soon recovered and suffered a bad cut over his forehead, while Miss Bigelow had several severe cuts about the body and hurt her back. Mr. Issar says that he proceeded after Mr. Thompson had walked down to the Six-Mile House, presumably to use a telephone.

While driving toward the city following the accident near the Six-Mile House, Mr. Issar met an Essex approaching, in fact holding the centre of the road, he told Constable Meadows. As he steered wide to avoid a collision his car ran off the road and crashed through 100 feet of bush and small trees, halting against a large tree. The car was not smashed. The two front wheels were broken and Mr. Issar was thrown forward. The other car did not stop. Mr. Issar reported.

The Ford coupe belonging to Mr. Thompson is a total wreck. Both Mr. Thompson and Miss Bigelow had narrow escapes from death. The car rolled over several times before landing in the ditch at the foot of the embankment.

BERLIN, Nov. 8.—Harry Ilorin, of the American team of Horan and Horner, competing in the six-day bicycling race here, surprised the field tonight with a sudden terrific sprint by which he gained two laps. Later, however, those laps were recovered by the entire field.

At the ninety-seventh hour of the race tonight the German-French team of Junge and Marcellin was leading with 1,672 miles. The Americans were seven laps behind, running in the field of ten.

Chapter of Accidents Follows in Close
Succession at Parson's Bridge in
Early Evening Hours

Two automobile drivers had narrow escapes within a short distance of one another on the Island Highway yesterday evening. They are Mr. John G. Thompson, of 2718 Forest Street, an employee of the Dominion Hotel, and Mr. Korn, guest of the Sylvester Hotel.

The first accident happened at about 5:30 p.m. Mr. John G. Thompson, driving a coupe with Miss Birthe Bigelow, had crossed the Parson's Bridge and was about to make the turn where the Island Highway curves away to the right past the Six-Mile House. An Essex coach was approaching in the opposite direction, driven by Mr. T. W. Wood, of 1212 Commercial Avenue.

Behind Mr. Thompson, Mr. Issar was driving. In a statement which he made later to Constable Meadows, he says that in passing Mr. Thompson's car he did not see the approaching Essex until too late to draw up behind the Ford. "I saw the Essex coming and Issar appears to have attempted to dart in front of the Ford, thus to avoid an accident with the approaching Essex. Swerving to the right, Mr. Issar's car apparently struck the front wheel of the Ford, sending it rolling down the embankment into a ditch. Mr. Issar reported to Constable Meadows of the Provincial Police that he stopped and helped Mr. Wood extricate Mr. Thompson and Miss Bigelow from the coupe. Mr. Thompson was unconscious at the time, but soon recovered and suffered a bad cut over his forehead, while Miss Bigelow had several severe cuts about the body and hurt her back. Mr. Issar says that he proceeded after Mr. Thompson had walked down to the Six-Mile House, presumably to use a telephone.

While driving toward the city following the accident near the Six-Mile House, Mr. Issar met an Essex approaching, in fact holding the centre of the road, he told Constable Meadows. As he steered wide to avoid a collision his car ran off the road and crashed through 100 feet of bush and small trees, halting against a large tree. The car was not smashed. The two front wheels were broken and Mr. Issar was thrown forward. The other car did not stop. Mr. Issar reported.

The Ford coupe belonging to Mr. Thompson is a total wreck. Both Mr. Thompson and Miss Bigelow had narrow escapes from death. The car rolled over several times before landing in the ditch at the foot of the embankment.

Time was when every woman knew exactly all the wheres and whens about her waistline. That quaint period having passed, she is forced at the beginning of each season to ask where is she to have her waistline, and where it is. This season it rests on the hips a little higher than the low previous seasons on account of the shortening of the skirt, but still far from normal. It is defined by wide or narrow belts by the ornamental waist, the bust, and skirt, or the new blouse effect, or the desire of a two-piece frock above. The one-piece frock

A Queer Reason
"Why have you and Miss Gad-

"Because she loves me so."
"That's a queer reason."
"Not at all. She believes in fortunfortune told, not long ago, she was three times. That settled the case, for the time being, at least. She said she timidity. "Would be afraid of dogs, too," was his justification. "If you

Accident Insurance

Sir.—Re the very interesting comments personal idea is that insurance will not do away with careless motor car drivers, but rather the reverse. Compare an insurance on a house with one on a car. If a man had a thousand dollars in his car it was being damaged by fire, and on that house he carried a big insurance, would he rush home to try to put it out? He probably would think if he did not say, "Well, why worry, it is insured." No car and accident insurance will prevent careless drivers.

I must admit I was disappointed in the latest Motor Act, especially in the driving permits. Why carry the permit in your pocket and the chance is that in changing one's clothes the permit might be lost? For that offence of $1 is collected. I think the best form is a white round disc hung on the windscreen where everyone can see it. Then directly on the first offence change that for a red one for at least two years. Every driver will give that car a wide berth, and for the next offence the same. What good does it do to fine a man a hundred dollars or more after he has smashed up your car and probably injured a friend for life? A persistent reckless driver after being fined two or three times would be better with a few strokes of the lash than continue a menace on the main roads.

Gulf Islands' Mail

Sir.—In one of your recent issues there appeared an article on South Gulf Islands, dealing with the coming of the Dorado of the Pacific Northwest, a title which this climate at least should claim—the terrible disasters that have recently befallen the much beloved Winter resorts. In Summer we have five mails per week, and up till now our Winter mails were taken over three mails per week. Now, however, on account of the fact that we are to be cut down to two mails per week, with no boat service from Vancouver, which means we are put back some twenty years.

The city gentleman would be very much annoyed to find a copy of the morning Colonist on his breakfast table, and in the evening, he enjoys his Times. How would he like to get these same papers, a bundle of three of each on Monday and the same on Thursday, with all other correspondence, magazines, etc., thrown in? It is on this day that the demand an immediate reply. The first mail to go out is by the Otter on Monday. She takes two days to get to Victoria, spends Monday night at Ganges, reaching Victoria some time on Tuesday evening. If the destination of the letter happens to be Victoria, it will be delivered on Wednesday morning—a week, less one day—and vice versa letters coming to the island.

Then there is the freight from Vancouver. At least one day every month is spent in the port of Seattle, and on the return trip to Victoria (from the Seaford wharf to the different farms from the Vancouver Shilling Co. alone) besides all the regular freight, which may not amount to so much this year, instead of being able to ship tons of apples, pears, etc., as usual, we are told by the wholesalers not to send them, as they are stored, and we would only lose them at sea. Consequently they are being fed to the cattle, pigs, chickens, etc., with an unavoidable loss of hundreds of dollars. It must be obvious that the first step towards the development of the Gulf Coast is to have a better mail and freight service, and to the Victoria Chamber of Commerce slogan is the bringing to the attention of the people at home and abroad the attractions of this lovely country and climate, then we will look to them for the betterment of our living conditions—conditions that exist within a two hours' run of our Capital city of Victoria.

(MRS.) T. REED,
Fulford Harbor, B.C., November 4, 1926.

School Taxes

Sir.—A letter of this heading ever since of W. E. Green, of Victoria, of recent date brings again to the attention of every taxpayer the stubborn fact that practically a third of the taxes go in quest of education. This condition is excused by those responsible by the remark, "Well it is for the children." I presume this the reason they have carried these people completely away.

I would suggest we have too many non-essentials in our schools being taught today, with the result every boy or girl considers he or she ought to be either a doctor or a lawyer, a stenographer, etc.; in fact, a trade in many cases is thought menial task.

The first case in point. A manager of a business had decided to want an office boy. There were twenty applications. In the test they had to write a sentence. In some of the words, not only was the spelling bad, it was not easy to say what the words were. Secondly, he had occasion to have some bookkeeping done at the hands of youth just passed through High School. As a result I have before me some figures which might seem uninteresting. Thirdly, a youth went to learn a trade in the building line. He objected to his first task as being too dirty. He wanted to make something, stating he had had manual lessons, and I suppose he had, and advanced his job.

More could be accomplished in our schools if more attention were given to the three Rs instead of a smattering of things as an afterthought.

It Didn't Matter to Her!
"Here," remarked the guide, who was showing a party over an old historic mansion, "had the room which Queen Elizabeth slept in."

"Pardon me," said a voice. "I fancy there's a mistake here. That bed is Jacobean, and a reproduction at that."

"But," protested the guide, "you'll allow me to contradict you, sir. I have been here for months now, and I know what I'm talking about. Besides, the Queen didn't care what made of bed it was, either."

"But couldn't you learn to love me, Pamela?" pleaded the suitor.

"Love you?" replied the haughty damsel. "I really couldn't."

He stood erect, a steely gleam in his eye.

"It is as I feared," he said. "You are too old to learn."

Have Musterole handy when a cold starts. It has all of the advantages of grandmother's mustard plaster without the burn. You feel a warm tingle as the healing ointment penetrates the pores, giving a cooling, cooling sensation and quick relief.

Made of pure oil of mustard and other simple ingredients, Musterole is recommended by many nurses and doctors. Try Musterole for bronchitis, sore throat, stiff neck, pleurisy, rheumatism, lumbago, croup, asthma, neuralgia, constipation, pain and aches of the back or joints, sore muscles, sprains, bruises, chilblains, frostbitten feet, colds of the chest. It may prevent pneumonia and "flu."

INTENSE DRAMA RUNS RAMPANT IN VARIETY

Thrill of Their Lives Given Fans in Powerful Love Story on Capital Screen

Drama of the most intense sort ran rampant at the Capitol last evening. Never had one film elicited an audience to such a high pitch of enthusiasm as did the Ufa picture, "Variety," which Paramount presented.

Emil Jannings is the only member of this German production known to Western film critics if he had not done anything else, Jannings would always be remembered because of his remarkable performance in "Variety."

"Variety" tells the tale of big, muscular Boss, and the girl, Bertha, he worships. There has been a hard life till Artellini, the world's greatest acrobat, asks them to join his act.

Prosperity such as they have never known, falls into their laps. Time passes, and with it, Bertha's love goes from Boss to his new partner. In oblivious of the drama being played right in her home, Boss continues his peaceful way. Then things start to happen. Boss is told of the guilty lovers and decides to put an end to the affair.

How he takes justice into his own hands will give any audience the thrill of life.

SWASHBUCKLER STORY TOUCHES HIGH SPOTS

King Vidor's "Bardeley the Magnificent" at Dominion Is Brilliant Drama of Hearts

King Vidor, director of "The Big Parade" and "La Boheme," rings the bell again.

His latest production for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, "Bardeley the Magnificent," starring John Gilbert, which opened at the Dominion Theatre yesterday, is a picture that represents a high light in screen entertainment.

The story is of France of the seventeenth century. This Bardeley person is a swashbuckling hero of the king's court, who is not above boasting of his prowess to any woman he sets his mind to and his strength.

But the villainous Chatellerault is sceptical of the wooring prowess and wagers him a right goodly sum that he won't have much luck with the fair Roxalanne de Lavedan, the fair companion of the novel of the same name by Sir Philip Gibbs. Ben Lyon plays the part of a young American hero. James Kirkwood is his friend. Colonel Fleming, Lowell Sherman is a deep-dyed Russian villain. Belle Bennett has the title role and Lois Moran, in the role of her daughter, Charles Murray, remembered as an old-time Mack Bennett star, has a comedy part.

COLUMBIA Gigantic in theme, THEATRE startling in its realism, "The Wandering Jew" is a picture that will surely lift your spirits, featuring Vera Reynolds, William Boyd and Charlie Murray, was heartily received by delighted audiences at the Columbia Theatre yesterday. It is the romance of steel inasmuch as it was filmed in the heart of the steel industry in Pittsburgh, and while it is a illuminative, the picture is a comedy drama of exceptional entertainment value.

MARINE and TRANSPORTATION

Wireless Stations On Pacific May Be Reduced

Possibility of Fewer Stations With More Powerful Equipment, Deputy Minister Says—Aids to Navigation on This Coast Recommended

One of the results of the visit of Mr. Alexander, Deputy Minister of Marine and Commander C. P. Edwards, O.B.E., Director of Radio-Telegraphy, to the Coast at this time, will probably be some recommendation in connection with the reorganization of the chain of wireless stations on the Canadian Pacific Coast.

Mr. Johnston, who was in Victoria on Sunday with Mr. Edwards, told The Colonist yesterday that the great developments in wireless communication since the period of the installation of the stations on the British Columbia Coast would probably cause the Canadian Government to follow the lead of other sections of the world and use fewer stations with more powerful equipment. He said that he was not prepared to say until they had had an opportunity of seeing the situation elsewhere. With regard to the station at Bull Harbor, he answered to a question as to whether the transfer from Triangle Island had been satisfactory. Mr. Johnston expressed himself affirmatively.

New Winter Schedule to Gulf Islands, effective Monday, November 1. The steamer Otter will leave Bellville Street Wharf every Monday and Wednesday at 7:15 a.m. and every Thursday at 8 a.m. for Gulf Island ports. Call for Edmonton, Royal estate, Victoria every Tuesday at 11 a.m. calling at Port Washington, Langara and Mayne Island en route to Vancouver.

BEAR TRADERS FAIL TO CONTROL MARKET

Steel Common Closes Higher but General Motors Shows Slump Due to Block Selling

NEW YORK. Nov. 8.—Renewed efforts of bear traders to bring about a general reaction in prices by attacking the motor shares, again failed today when the market moved upward, after several intervals of heaviness under the leadership of United States Steel. Common Steel closed 2½ points higher at 172 1/2, being influenced by predictions of an unusually favorable October tonnage statement on Wednesday.

Speculators for the advance laid considerable stress on President Coolidge's advocacy of a rebate on 1925 taxes, and with the result several large corporations will be benefited materially by such action.

Banks called about $20,000,000 in loans during the day, and the call money rate held steady at 4½ per cent, although loans in the outside market were reported as low as 4 per cent.

Several brokerage houses circulated reports that $4 extra bonus would be declared on General Motors at Thursday's meeting. Large blocks of shares were offered for sale throughout the session, the closing price of 140 representing the net loss of 1½ on the day, but 2½ above the lay's low.

Baldwin closed 3 points higher at 127½ after having touched 128. Congress gave a good demonstration of group strength.

Heavy buying of Rock Island, which touched a new high at 68 ¾, in anticipation of an early declaration of dividends, was one of the features of the railroad groups. Atchison also received good buying support. Total sales, 1,368,000 shares.

The sluggish behavior of the bond market today furnished a striking contrast to the lively buying operations of the past fortnight.

Profit taking accounted for the check to the upward price movement, most of the selling was easily absorbed, leaving prices not far from last week's closing levels.

Chicago Grain

(Supplied by R. C. Bell Corp., Ltd.)

CHICAGO. Nov. 8.—Rain in northern Argentina and light frosts in the south and with some claims of damage and cables telling of premature ripening in Australia, combined to bring about a bulge of 30 bushels to a cent in wheat, and 20 bushels to a cent in corn, on December 1st to nearly 5 cents over the low of last week. There was fairly good buying early with sellers of offers forced to protect themselves, but the bulges brought in increase pressure and the figures were not maintained.

Outside traders were not large. Liverpool showed pronounced strength, again closing 2 3-8 to 2 7-8 higher. Export sales were $300,000 to 400,000 bushels in all positions.

Delivery was on corn with all deliveries at new low on the crop.

Saturday's close with stop loss orders uncovered on way down. Support was lacking and the decline easily attained. Cash basis was steady, with country offerings relatively small. Oats were firmer early, but eased with corn.
